Tell Café Drink of the Month: June

COLD BREW ICED COFFEE

For all of you that might not be coffee aficionados you may be asking, "What's the buzz about this brewing method that makes it better?" Cold brew coffee is brewed using room temperature or cold water that has direct contact with the coffee grounds for 12-24 hours. Once the coffee is finished steeping the grounds are removed. This creates a less acidic, less bitter coffee that has more body and is a bit more mellow in taste. Cold brew coffee has up to 65% less acidity compared to regular coffee because the hot brew method pulls out the oils carrying acid in the coffee beans. With lower acidity levels, it is also easier on the digestive system.
